How Kaffirs Work. What "working like a nigger"-that is, a negro in South · Africa-really means has been explained by one who, has seen this wonder. He says that the phrase is one of the sillest and most inexact ever coined. "A gang of Kaffirs," he said, "were at work. They were loading rails on a truck, and they did it as though they were burying their dead. At the head of the gang walked a sort of chief chanting the most lugubrious dirge ever heard. At a crawling pace he led his men to the rails. Then came a long pause. This was to enable the singing head manto finish the first wail. When the Kaffirs got tired of waiting they bent down and picked up the raii, their movements keeping time with the funeral march. When at last the rall was holsted on the men's shoulders the singer changed the measure to a chant of triumph. As a matter of fact, two dock laborers could easily have done all the work that was done by these eight negroes."-Indianapolis News. Helplessness.

The greatest moment in our career is when we awaken to the shining truth that our life, to make or mar, is wholly in our hands; that neither dark destiny crees of the gods nor the machinations of men or devils can cheat us-of that greatness of soul and serenity of mind which are the crown of real success.

The most terrible note in the despair of the despairing is the sound of helpessness. To feel that the universe is a huge machine to grind us at last to dust, that the odds of existence are against us and that we are borne down by the tramp of irresistible forcesthis is the salt taste of failure.

But when a man has discovered that he himself is master and that no outside force can touch his inner triumph that discovery is as of a new world, the America of spirit, the opening vista of limitless opportunity.-Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World.

To Each Age Its Problems. It is not enough that we leave our institutions as our fathers shaped them. They knew little or nothing of the conditions which we face. Sufficient unto the age is the work thereof. It is not the right of any generation to project its will into the future, but it is the duty of each generation to adjust its institutions to meet its own needs. Men need not wait until death to realize many of their ideals. They can have things here on earth which their fathers associated with the millennium They need no longer overwork nor go cold and hungry nor suffer from pestilence or even famine. Machinery has provided the possibilities of a new life. When all of these possibilities are realized-when no one is overworked, cold or hungry, when all are leading joyous, purposeful lives-adjustment will be complete-welfare will be universal. Can We Pull Anything? Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent Eng ish scientist, said in a lecture once that there is no such thing as pulling. To speak of a horse pulling a cart was, he said, incorrect. The horse did not pull the cart. It pushed against its collar and thereby produced motion in the cart. Similarly the oarsman pushed the water, and the man drawing a handcart had to clasp the handle, and the driving force was caused by the part which clasped the handle and was therefore behind it. Even if the cart was fastened to the man's coat tail he did not pull it. He pushed against his

Hay In the Middle Ages.

Hay seems to have been little known in the middle ages. Stock was wintered mostly on straw and leaves. Tusser, who wrote in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, gives much advice to the farmer as to the cutting and storing of green branches, which might serve as fodder when pasture failed. He is particular as to the desirability of saving the beech cuttings for the milk cows, whereas for sheep anything would do. A miserable dependence it would appear te us now, but then it seems to have been looked on, if not as a matter of course, at least as a thing practiced by the more forehanded and capable. There must have been some natural meadows in England even then, but perhaps all their produce was saved for the horses of kings. As far as Y can recollect, there is no mention of hay in Shakespeare, if we except Bottom's remark, "Good hay sweet hay. hath no fellow," and even that suggests its rarity. By Milton's time, 100, years later, "The mower whets his scythe" "And the tanned haycock in the mead" were familiar country ob-

Bessemer's III Luck. Sir Henry Bessemer was one of those inventors that ill luck pursued and from whose clutches he finally escaped by indomitable perseverance. In 1833 the British government was losing $500,000 a year by the fraudulent misuse of embossed deed stamps. Bessemer rendered this impossible by the use of perforated dies which dated the stamps. He presented the invention to the government, which forgot its promise of a permanent appointment, but thanked him. His great invention in the manufacture of steel so impressed the ironmakers that they paid him $135,000 for licenses and "wanted their money back." He had forgotten the proportion of fools to wise men. It took him two years to render the process "foolproof." and he pressed his point home by the setting up of his factory in Sheffield.

Turned the Tables. day tells a story of a Londoner, "Romeo" Coates, who thought he was a born actor. Coates paid a large sum to be allowed to play Romeo at Drury Lane, where he appeared bedizened with jewels and was received with vociferous applause by a public who appreciated the joke. Some of the young men who were the favored associates of the prince regent concocted a practical joke at the expense of Coates. They got a sheet of the prince's note paper and sent him an invitation to dine at the pavilion. The prince got wind of the trick, and when Coates was ushered in and the jokers were
